

My dear Debra, I promised to write you, and I will. though only a word. I saw him last night - and though disguised as a fop still beautiful - and we not superlatively happy. to say that we saw the last of Burke
he never looked

one half so well.
before I was quite enchanted. Barnett too performed like an angel. It almost broke my heart to think that it was the last time for a long time that I should look upon his face ~~again~~ but
"perhaps I may yet."

Shales is coming here at three o'clock today's to read to Mr. Parley & we are to have the Honour of instructing tragedy - who was it

that you were so glad to see in the stage - not on it.

I know who you are glad to see there -

I send you a play
bill - to dream upon yours - in a turning turn

Miss. L. Verton -

Thursday noon.

My dear mother

We send Loving out to you to make a visit in hopes that you will reform her, for all her relatives in town pronounce her totally unbearable. I intended one time to-day to come out with Mr Guinsbury to stay till Monday, but there came an invitation from Mrs Farbell to spend this evening there, so I concluded to put it off. Mr & Mrs Conners & son is ^{one} ~~were~~ to be there. Annie Thaxter the Aspin walls to say nothing of Mrs Farbells "boy", as she calls Fletcher. & as I have never seen him I feel very curious. I may come to-morrow & I may Saturday. We had a 20 dollar application to-day a daughter of the L'Epine watches We shall then have 23 scholars in all.
Also Mrs Cushing, Elizabeth's mother who is daughter to Mr Graufner the music master, has offered to give Lucia lessons in music. & Emma too if we want her too. We shall only accept for Lucia

This last is a great satisfaction to us all. Tell aunt Mary that I should have written to her but Caroline & Anna were both writing. We feel much obliged & gratified by her letters. We should be kept in perfect ignorance of all Weymouth affairs were it not for her. I hope Grandmama is better. Give my love to aunt Priscilla & aunt Phoebe & tell the last mentioned person that Mrs Farbell invited Anne's "Kedron" to be brought.

Your most affectionate daughter Deborah
